Music Licenses

- Does your organisation hold a music license for its various offices and buildings?

No

- Does your organisation require multiple music licenses for different buildings?

No

- How much does your organisation pay for each of its music licenses?

The Forrester Gallery has a music licence in place for playing music on the ground floor public area of the Forrester Gallery. The cost for the most recent year for this licence was $611.09.

- Who provides your music license(s)?

The Forrester Gallery Licence is from APRA trading OneMusic

- Why do you have the licenses? Is music played in general staff areas, to staff at their desks, in staff training sessions, at conferences or to callers on hold?

Currently we have a music licence in place for the playing music on the ground floor public area of the Forrester Gallery.

The only other facility that we play music in is the Aquatic Centre, which only plays the radio through its sound system. We are however currently looking into whether or not we require any such licence for the music played during our aqua-aerobics classes.

We do also have 'on hold' music that plays in our phone system, but that is simply the music that came with the Genesys Cloud Software for our call centre system.
