	Hi. Overall I think most of your plans are good. But the building on Forrester Heights could be done elsewhere. Part of what everyone loves about Oamaru is that it is not built out and once built on, that changes. Who pays for the costs of finding out if its ok to build on that land and geological costs, especially if they find any skeletons etc. Another concern I have is height restrictions because of restricted sunlight to neighboring housing. If in the country and not close houses, sure. This applies to trees blocking sun, which is really important to everyones well-being. And with climate change, more severe wind and rain, trees more likely to fall. I think Oamaru is unique with our beautiful old buildings, dont make it the same as other towns. Kind Regards Sandy Jones
